RE: Patent Application of Scott A. Heimermann and Stephen Danforth for "Fully automated, requisition-driven,....", claiming benefit of Provisional Patent Application 60/226,818, filed August 22, 2000

Dear Commissioner or Designee:

Please find the following documents enclosed for filing as a patent application:

1. A check/money order in the sum of $535.00, reflecting payment of the application fee;
2. Fee Transmittal for FY 2001;
3. Utility Patent Application Transmittal;
4. Declaration for Utility or Design Patent Application;
5. Six sheets of informal drawing, labeled Fig. 1 through Fig. 6, inclusive;
6. Specification of Invention, Claims for Patent (including request under MPEP Sec. 707.07(j)), and Abstract, consisting in toto of sheets;
7. Amendment A to this patent application, to assert the benefit of the aforesaid provisional patent application;
8. Information Disclosure by Applicant; and
9. Twelve disclosure documents referenced by said Information Disclosure by Applicant, numbered DD01 through DD12, inclusive.

Please note the following matters additionally:

A. The above-named applicants-joint inventors qualify for, and claim small entity status.

B. No federally sponsored research or government contract was involved in this invention. However, since the invention creates an innovative, effectively "real-time" e-procurement system for government, and since one citation to prior art refers to JECPO, a procurement method of the United States Department of Defense, and apparently developed in cooperation with NASA, applicants simply point these facts out, and state their willingness to follow any particular procedure that may be invoked thereby.

C. Although the enclosed Specification and Claims make repeated reference to "digital processing", this invention is a business method, not a software process. Accordingly, no computer program, or listing or algorithm thereof is enclosed.

D. A receipt postcard with postage affixed is also enclosed. Please return it by mail to the address thereon upon receipt.

Please file and examine this patent application. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Stephen Danforth
